

---

Research Center for Information and Telecommunication

The Center explores the desirable form of the network-oriented society from the viewpoints of the trend of users' needs and of technological trend. Our fundamental interest is how information and communication technology should be exploited for enrichment of our personal and social life.

- Study on the trends of information and communication services
- Study on the actual situation of ICT utilization
- Study for establishment of secure network-oriented society
- Study on environment-friendly IT development and use
- Study on the current status and trends in research, countermeasures and regulation of the electromagnetic environment
- Study on new work styles and business activities based on the ubiquitous ICT environment

